Beirut is the capital and largest city of Lebanon. No recent population census has been done but 2007 estimates ranged from slightly more than 1 million to 2.2 million as part of Greater Beirut. Located on a peninsula at the midpoint of Lebanon's Mediterranean coast, Beirut is the country's largest and main seaport. It is one of the oldest cities in the world, inhabited more than 5000 years ago. The first historical mention of Beirut is found in the Amarna letters from the New Kingdom of Egypt, which date to the 15th century BC. Beirut is Lebanon's seat of government and plays a central role in the Lebanese economy, with most banks and corporations based in its Central District, Badaro, Rue Verdun, Hamra, Ryad el Soloh street, and Achrafieh. Following the destructive Lebanese Civil War, Beirut's cultural landscape underwent major reconstruction. Identified and graded for accountancy, advertising, banking/finance and law, Beirut is ranked as a Beta World City by the Globalization and World Cities Research Network

Entertainment option in Beirut i.e. Nightlife / Casino / Pub & Bar

Beirutis are known for their hospitality: as a visitor you'll easily make friends wherever you end up, and you'll probably even score an invitation to Sunday lunch with the family in the village. Clubbing in Beirut is a year-round concern, but nights really get thumping in the summer, when most of the city's clubbing institutions relocate to the BIEL Waterfront (also known as the New Corniche). A multi-acre, post-industrial, brutalist fantasy, BIEL features great swathes of Tetrapods, which look like giant geometric toy jacks made of poured concrete, waiting for revellers to pose with them for the 'gram. It juts out into the Mediterranean, which for summer clubbers means a divine cool breeze, and, for the extremely jolly, sunrise over the sea. House music is king at BIEL: summer standouts including The Gärten by überhaus and AHM, which also features a Thursday hip-hop and R&B night, rare in this techno-mad city. In the same vein are the summer parties at the Beirut Sporting Club, overlooking the Pigeon Rocks in Raouche. Promoters Decks on the Beach own Fridays, and C U NXT SAT rule Saturdays; both host international house DJs who spin for starry-eyed PYTs.
